As a scholar, researcher, author, teacher, administrator, consultant, and civil rights crusader, Hale was the engineer of many new initiatives at The Ohio State University. He founded the Graduate and Professional Schools Visitation Days Program in 1971 and its undergraduate counterpart, the Minority (Morrill) Scholars Program in 1982. Through his efforts, nearly $15 million in graduate fellowship awards were granted to approximately 1,200 minority students. Eighty percent of these fellowship recipients earned master’s and/or doctoral degrees. With the awarding of full tuition scholarships through the Minority (Morrill) Scholars Program to high school seniors, the university was able to attract a “Community of Minority Scholars” numbering more than 500 during Hale’s tenure. Hale designed a symbolic model of his focus as the Vice Provost for Minority Affairs. The model was a well-muscled arm, clasping a diploma in a clenched fist, symbolizing “Power through Education.” The design was featured in university publications and a copper replica that was presented to Dr. Hale by the OMA staff upon his retirement.

As a capstone to his illustrious career, The Ohio State University Board of trustees voted him Vice Provost and Professor Emeritus, naming in his honor The Frank W. Hale, Jr. Black Cultural Center and designated the building in which it is housed as Hale Hall. Hale delivered the 1988 Summer Commencement address at The Ohio State University. He was honored by the City of Columbus, as 1,200 guests participated in his retirement banquet on December 4, 1988, at the Aladdin Shrine Temple. An endowed scholarship has also been established in his name at The Ohio State University.

His widow, Mignon Scott-Hale, is a retired elementary school teacher.

DR. HALE WAS A DREAMER who understood the multiple and complex ways of what it took for some students to achieve. As he often stated to student groups, “you were born qualified; you just go to school to certify the fact.” A concerned and committed teacher, administrator, and champion for equality of opportunity for more than five decades, Dr. Hale helped pave the way for those who work with young people, demonstrating that our youth deserve nothing less than the best from the people who are entrusted with their care and development. He also challenged students to understand that equality is not a one-way street, and that they must establish goals and set strategies for reaching those goals so they can conquer those forces that would sidetrack them in their aspirations to be the best they can be. He challenged administrators as well to provide the essential financial resources that students needed. “Commitment without cash is counterfeit,” was one of his choice calls for equity.

Early in his life as a student himself at Union College in Lincoln, Nebraska in 1945, Hale was the Founder Director of the Hub of Harmony Male Chorus, a group of African American young men who attended the college. They specialized in “down home Negro Spirituals,” and on January 11, 1946, won the Amateur Hour Program with spectacular success by winning both the Chorus Group Prize and the Grand Prize that included wins over the Instrumental Group and Oratorical Group winners. The “Hub” made concert appearances throughout the Midwest in Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota. On April 18, 1948, the group gave its final concert before a enthusiastic audience of 5,000 patrons at the University Nebraska Coliseum in Lincoln, Nebraska.

With the proceeds from the concert, The Hub made a $3,000 down payment on the Church of the Brethren and its three bedroom parsonage. The total cost was $9,000, and the Central States Conference of Seventh-day Adventists, under the presidency of Elder Frank L. Bland, assumed the remaining balance. The group also established a Hub of Harmony Scholarship Fund at Union College from the concert proceeds as well.

The church, organized by students was named Allon Chapel in memory of an early Christian educator, and it became the home and center of worship for African American students, students from South America, Caribbean settings, and local members of the community. Later, Hub of Harmony II was reorganized under the direction of Raymond Davis of Omaha, Nebraska. Allon Chapel has since purchased a new church home, and now has a membership of more than 300 congregants.
Even as a student at the University of Nebraska, he was a member of SAC (Social Action Council) that was successful in integrating the Mayfair Grill Restaurant and other facilities in Lincoln.

Hale was blessed with an inquiring and analytical mind. He felt what his African-American brothers and sisters felt. As a leader, he recognized that one’s strength comes from the ability to live as a part of the collective community. He was aware that his position in leadership was based on the people’s confidence in him and their will to have him as their leader. Well-read and having heard and observed a good deal during his lifetime, he was able to penetrate deeply into the problems that impacted negatively on African-American women and men. On matters of forthrightness dealing with issues of race, his record was a coherent narrative of consistency.

Hale led the struggle for racial equality in the Seventh-day Adventist Church by his renouncement of “old guard” practices at the 1962 General conference of Seventh-day Adventists World Conference in San Francisco. His stand, along with that of his associates, particularly Mylas Martin and Burrell and Bonnie Scott, was infectious and spread more rapidly and effectively than ever before. Doors of opportunity had been in danger of coming to a standstill. After the San Francisco scenario, urgency gripped denominational institutions so that schools, hospitals, publishing houses, and Union Conferences, and the General Conference immediately got in touch with reality, and as a result began enlisting African-Americans into non-traditional areas. It was an emergence that enabled church leaders to begin to make good on their own commitment to equality and justice.

Dr. Hale’s role in the advancement of The Ohio State University as a premier institution in the graduation of African-American doctorates was, according to peers, singularly impressive and effective. Intrigued by his position on issues of equal opportunity, he was often referred to as the “Dean of Diversity” in higher education. The summit of his effectiveness was prominent during the 1970’s and 1980’s when Ohio State was the Number One producer of African-American Ph.D’s in America. It was his rugged will and positive outreach efforts that mobilized administrators and faculty at historically Black Colleges and universities to support his efforts during the Annual Graduate and Professional School Visitation Days Program which was established in 1971. As a tribute to the several hundred senior scholars from historically Black Colleges and universities and institutions with contributions of Hispanic students who were the guests of the University during the first week of November during the 1970’s and 1980’s, a special gospel extravaganza featuring national gospel artists was held at Mershon Auditorium the first Sunday night in November. Among the breathtaking key attractions were the Edwin Hawkins Singers, the Walter Hawkins Singers, Andre Crouch, Shirley Caesar, and the Winans Family. Local artists were featured as preliminary participants each year. The initiative was also a strategy to challenge the public perception of the university which had suffered from a host of negative images on matters of race. It was an effort to include events that were relevant to people of color and to begin to balance the scales of inclusion and equality in a meaningful way.

At the same time, he helped create a plan of action and an atmosphere on campus that motivated others to overcome different operational questions that had hampered earlier efforts. He spent a great deal of time developing positive relationships with heads of academic units. He knew that his success, with the collaboration of OSU faculty, administrators, students, and alumni would enhance the image of the university. He also was able to establish viable relationships with historically Black Colleges and Universities as well as with national community leaders in education, business, religion and politics.

It soon became routine for departments to change their past practices to a mission which helped the institution to create a model and mode that other institutions became to emulate throughout the nation. Hale’s initiatives helped to change the face of The Ohio State University. It was also a journey that began to change the landscape for diversity of higher education communities throughout America, as many institutions replicated The Ohio State University model.

His love and support for students has resulted in their pursuing professional careers, establishing impressive career profiles, and in giving generously of their time and energy as an invaluable resource, for the encouragement, gratitude and for the assistance which Dr. Hale had given to them in the pursuant of their goals.

Prior to his serving as President at Oakwood College, he was the first faculty member to earn the Ph.D while serving the institution. In Dr. Mervyn Warren’s history of the college: Oakwood! A Vision Splendid, he stated that “new frontier,” “advancement” and “service” could very well capsulize the Hale years... “At only thirty-nine years of age, he brought a different administrative tone to the office. Hale was also uniquely non-clergy and the first president not of the cloth and viewed as a ‘pure educator.’ He focused on a regal educational leadership that resulted in significant events and milestones that met institutional needs with innovations and trends that paid off in continued signs of growth.”

Dr. Hale was an active member of the Ephesus Seventh-day Adventist Church in Columbus, Ohio, where he served as a Local Elder, Sabbath School Superintendent, Founding President of the Peterson Society of Adventist Men, Building Fund Chairman for the church that was completed in 1987, and Chairman of the Education Committee. Hale was Chairman of the Layman’s Leadership Conference, a civil rights lay organization in the Seventh-day Adventist Church, that was active in spearheading the crusade for the rights of Blacks within the Church in the early 1960’s.

I HAVE LEARNED FROM YOU, December 3, 2010.
(One Day After My First Chemotherapy Treatment)

My Dear Mignon,

I have learned to SMILE,
observing your chubby, cheeked, cherubic cheerfulness consistently lighting up each present and passing day.

You have taught me to give DIGNITY and DEFERENCE to everyone, regardless of their station in life, because each person has the Divine Right of Nobility within.

You have taught me how to DANCE on my lovely lavender Sun Room floor from the joy that comes from within as a happily married couple, is not deterred or swayed by that which has been predetermined, prepackaged, predigested or canonized by parochial conservatism.

I have learned to stake out my star of FAITH on your skies of visibility and invisibility because of your fortitude, through the ebb and flow of your calm daily challenges.

I have learned to LAVISH the LURKINGS of your HEART around the velvet ventricles of mine.

You have taught me how to capture the PRAYERS, PSALMS and PETITIONS, OF YOUR DEVOTIONS TO AN ALMIGHTY GOD, which have lifted the Valleys of my Vulnerabilities and the Vaulted Vapors of my invariable
Vicissitudes to the BUTTRESSED, IMMEASURABLE DIVINE ENGINES OF MERCY AND GRACE.

I HAVE LEARNED TO LEARN because of you.
I have learned to listen, to learn, to live, and to love, because of you. Thank you my darling. I don’t know how many days removed this will be before my transition, but you can be so assured, that until that day, I’ll still be learning, believing and loving you Angel Baby.

Frank Acknowledgement

With deep appreciation, the family wishes to express its love and gratitude to the many relatives and friends who have given unstintingly of their encouragement, and who have extended so many expressions of kindness. In God’s plan, each one of us, when our life’s work is ended as one of God’s faithful servants, can be assured that God’s tomorrow will be better than today.

Frank W. Hale, Jr. has impacted the history of the Seventh-day Adventist Church more directly than any other black non-clergy of this era. Through the books and articles that he has authored and edited; through the harnessing of lay energies for social justice; through his preaching and teaching classrooms and pulpits all over the land; through six wonderful years of growth and academic excellence at the helm of Oakwood College; through 17 years as departmental chair, graduate school dean and vice-provost of Ohio State University, assisting thousands of young black aspirants to higher education; through courageous leadership in the nation’s civil-rights struggles; and through the sheer force of one of the truly charismatic personalities of our time, Frank Hale has bravely advanced the yardsticks of our political and education processes.
